

2024 Best Places to Camp in the Pacific Region

thedyrt.com/press/2024-best-places-to-camp-in-the-pacific-region/

By Press

on May 14, 2024 12:30 am

Whether you're into exploring tidepools, climbing rugged mountain peaks, strolling on the beach or chasing waterfalls, camping on the West Coast is hard to beat. The Pacific Ocean literally shapes this part of the country, but it also plays a huge role as to why there are so many great campgrounds here.

Bay Point Landing in Oregon is No. 1 this year on the Best Places to Camp in the Pacific Region list, its third consecutive appearance in the Top 10. While four of the top 6 campgrounds are right on the ocean, Elkamp Eastcreek, in inland Washington, snags the No. 3 spot. Lyre River Campground, on Washington's Olympic Peninsula, is No. 4 and located right on the Salish Sea, which separates the U.S. and Canada.

Check out these and the rest of this year's Best Places to Camp Regional Award winners in the Pacific Region, which are based on reviews and ratings from The Dyrt's vast community of campers.

1. Bay Point Landing — Oregon

Location: Coos Bay

What makes it great: Situated on a quiet, calm bay along the Oregon Coast, with views on all sides, this campground has a menu of luxuries way beyond the usual camping experience: hot tub, heated pool, wine tastings, yoga, hiking tours. There’s a playground and game room, Wi-Fi and cable. Campsites have full hookups and a modern bathhouse, laundry, and a camp store. Or you can opt to stay in one of the sleek, high-design camping cabins or an Airstream. The surrounding area has several hiking trails, wildlife viewing opportunities and world-class fishing. The location is close to the fun seaside town of Bandon to the south and the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area to the north.

What The Dyrt’s community of campers has to say:

“We have been camping in a pickup truck camper during a cross-country trip but we opted to splurge and booked 2 nights in an Airstream at Bay Point. It was SO worth it! The Airstreams are very new and IMPECCABLY clean.” — Peter F

“Talk about GLAMPING! They will bring wine, wood, games, did I say wine, and more directly to your site!!! They have an indoor pool, a kiddie room, a gym, a place to hold parties indoors, wifi, showers, place to do laundry, and cute fireplaces.” — Manda M

“You can tell the developers put money into the property and thought through about the experience – whether you are just camping and having fun or whether you have to work from the road.” — Vivi W

Campground detailsPrice: $50-279Number of sites: 178RV sites: YesFires allowed: YesPets allowed: Yes